WITH THE FARMERS

Farm Bureau Official Information

Standardization Key to Co-operative Success

"As a great, powerful instrument when intelligently used for doing practical things, co-operation deserves careful consideration."

It is a panacea for the wrongs of agriculture, for the misfortunes of misguided farmers, for the changing of bankrupt farming into permanent prosperity. Industry is its own boom-erang.

No farm commodity can be merchandized in a modern way that has not been rigidly standardized in a sense of sufficient quantity to be available dependably and continuously throughout the season of consumption.

That is the thought which Theodore MacKlin, of the agricultural economics staff of the University of Wisconsin, would have deeply implanted in the mind of every pros- pering farmer. He has been con- vinced that all of the noted instances referred to by farmers of examples of successful market- ing of oil or manufactured articles have been cases where the com- modities were first thoroughly stan- dardized.

Standardized Products

Dependability and sufficiency with- out a surplus are features of service which MacKlin believes always win compensation. They are the out- growth of standardization work that permits one to obtain just what is wanted.

The financial success of Danish co- operative butter, bacon and egg mar- keting economists view as founded upon the work of grading and stand- arding. With but few exceptions, no commodity, according to MacKlin, should be marketed without first being graded. All this noted cases of successful co-operation in the United States and Canada listed by him have also grown up with the perfection of the grading and standardizing idea. That a good article, always the same, will help sell itself in reputation while a poor commodity, differing con- stantly, must always be sold at a low price of personal persuasion, is not so new to illustrate with an actual business example the gains which are derived from this service.

Standardized Products

"The advertiser of good, dependably graded products, says MacKlin, and argue that his work increased or maintained prices," says MacKlin. "Similarly, those who do the work of classifying, grading and standardizing goods and who administer the stan- dards and inspection will claim that the gain flows from their efforts. This one thing, however, is certain—that an unstandardized product, of better or poorer as well as variable quality, does not give results over a period of time."

"However much or little the suc- cess of selling at remunerative prices is due to these two lines of work, it is certain that the characteristics of the product must be guaranteed be- fore it is safe to show the best ad- vantage in marketing. A bad thing advertised is also a bad thing avoided. The theory and practice of financially successful adver- tising is that it pays to help make a good thing better known."

Service Improvement

"While there are not numerous facts available to show the extent to which prices are higher than they would be in the absence of stan- dardization, enough is definitely known to illustrate the importance of this service. Only a few of the co-opera- tive marketing companies have been in operation long enough to develop reliable experience in this line. Many co-operative companies have estab- lished a record of reducing costs. In contrast, few enterprises have lived through a long enough period to develop the highest class of service. To greatly improve the serv- ice in marketing in such unimpeach- able terms that measurement may be made in dollars and cents is a difficult task only because there are so very few instances of co-operative suc- cess. Service improvement is a slow, gradual process. It is achieved by those who persist in well doing for a long period of time."

"Many successful co-operative com- panies, while making important sav- ings, cannot show in a clear-cut man- ner the reduction of savings to their actual marketing. The reason for this is because many other causes for changed prices had their influence. Probably the best and most unmis- takable example of the co-operative com- pany to those who operate in a rigidly standardized their product is the experience of the Tillamook County Creamery association. In this in- stance the general cheese market ex- hibited both a rise and fall in price, yet the standardized Tillamook pro- duced a premium that has become stabilized at about four cents per pound when the price of the stan- dard cheese was at the same level. This is a record of co-operative suc- cess. Service improvement is a slow, gradual process. It is achieved by those who persist in well doing for a long period of time."

PROGRAM IS GIVEN FOR MOTHERS OF DAY NURSERY CHILDREN

A delightful program was enjoyed by those who attended a party given in the women's rest room Sunday afternoon for day nursery mothers and their children. Mrs. J. H. Fisher sang a number of selections with Miss Edna Pond as piano accompanist. Miss Emily Moser, children's li- brarian, gave some valuable hints on story-telling and the selection of children's reading, then carried her audience away from the every-day cares of life by telling three char- ming fairy stories, which it is safe to say will be retold to little ones in a number of Janesville homes. Earl Schaeferberg furnished a violin ac- companying, with Miss Frances Cakes at the piano. Home made candy was served by members of the day nur- sery committee, during a social hour which followed the program.

United States and Canada. It is very important that farmers co-operate to improve marketing services than to reduce costs of mar- keting or to secure the regular rate of price paid for their products. The experience demonstrated that other organizations would clearly prove the same thing were all of the essential facts available to make an equally clear-cut comparison. Stan- dardization service has been the back- bone of co-operative success in mar- keting citrus fruits, nuts, apples, eggs, butter, cheese, wool, bacon, rice, and other commodities. Covering in both type of product and character of problem the whole range of farm output.

TOWN SUPERVISORS NOT ELIGIBLE FOR POLLS INSPECTORS

Madison — Town supervisors are not eligible to be inspectors of elec- tion as which they are candidates for office, District Attorney Morris Barrett of Kenosha was advised to- day by the attorney general's de- partment.

An opinion written by Assistant Attorney General Bunn held further that inspectors for an election where supervisors are disqualified, are elected by the remaining super- visors or in case all are disqualified, electors present at the opening of the polls should choose such inspec- tors.

A supervisor is disqualified only for the election in which he is a candidate, the legal department ruled.

MORGAN LOAN TO FRANCE EVIDENCE OF CONFIDENCE

First Since New Policy

Since that policy was announced no large loans have been made to any of the allied powers except Japan, who needed the money for reconstruction following the earthquake. Loans to smaller countries have been negoti- ated, but the loan to France is the first evidence of confidence and just- ice. Mr. Morgan's action in making the loan to France is evidence of confidence and justice. Mr. Morgan's action in making the loan to France is evidence of confidence and justice.

Evidence of Confidence

J. P. Morgan and Company noted a deal agents for the British govern- ment before America entered the war and floated a large loan for France since the war. Through their French banking connections they are kept in close touch with affairs in Paris and they do not make a loan of $100,000,000 without assuring themselves about the future of France's finances. The loan itself is an evidence of confidence and justice. Mr. Morgan's action in making the loan to France is evidence of confidence and justice.

German Loan Next

If the above report is accepted, and it looks as if it will be, officials of the government here are optimistic of the next step will be to provide a loan for Germany. Out of that loan some advances in reparation pay- ments to the allies undoubtedly will be made. The loan would have to be floated by private bankers, too, and again the United States government will have an opportunity indirectly to approve. The government has no legal right to object to any loans by private bankers, but the weight of its disapproval is a moral factor which few bankers could ignore.

Broadly speaking, the impression one gets here, especially since the Morgan loan was announced, is that European affairs at last are on the mend and that the important in- fluences may be looked for in the next several months which may have their reflex in increased purchases of American farm products and manu- factured goods because, as the situa- tion is improved, foreign currencies will have a greater purchasing power.

La Follette of Wisconsin is expected to poll a considerable vote, through stickers, of which 200,000 have been issued. W. G. McAdoo, democratic presidential candidate, is unopposed.

POSTPONE MEETING DUE TO FIGHT SHOW

On account of the boxing show at the fair grounds pavilion and other activities scheduled for Monday night, Frank W. Kennedy, president of the Lakota club, announced the postponement of the regular meeting of the Lakotas will be held Tuesday at 8 p. m., instead of Monday. A full turn- out is desired as four new members are to be sworn in and several amendments will be voted on.

Changes in the Wilson cabinet during eight years of the democratic administration were relatively few in number. When Mr. Wilson was elected to the supreme court of the United States, Colonel House was in- strumental in the selection of Thomas M. Gregory of Connecticut as attorney general to succeed Mr. Palmer, who had been offered the secretaryship of war in 1912 but who declined it because of his Quaker convictions against war. Mr. Gregory was properly recognized. Mr. Wilson was aware of this feeling and endeavored to correct it by appoint- ing Mr. Palmer to be attorney gen- eral in 1917 and later Mr. Gregory was properly recognized.

Mr. Wilson was convinced that the secretary of war ought to be a lawyer and this was one of the reasons why he asked Mr. Palmer to take the post. When Mr. Palmer declined, Mr. Wilson turned in per- sonally to his private secretary, Mr. Tamm, who recommended Mr. Charles Lindbergh of New Jersey. Mr. Garrison's reputa- tion on the bench was such as to as- sure an absolutely clear administration of the war department with its many judicial questions, for during peace times there are various build- ing projects under the supervision of the war department and other ad- ministrative tasks in which a legal mind is of inestimable value. And when Mr. Garrison resigned, the president chose another lawyer, Newton D. Baker, to become secre- tary of war.

Mr. Garrison did not have a po- litical mind. His experience on the bench had made him inflexible and logical. His deliberate opinion that a president should back up the recommendations of a cabinet officer led to the subsequent break between the two men. Mr. Wilson was in ac- cord with Mr. Garrison's recom- mendation as to the formation of a citizen army but when Mr. Garrison encountered the opposition of Mr. Hay the chairman of the house com- mittee on military affairs, the presi- dent felt that he should not make an issue as between a member of his cabinet and the men on Capitol Hill whose support was so essential to the passage of any kind of a pro- gram of national defense. Mr. Gar- rison held to the notion so prevalent in Europe that when a cabinet officer does not command the support of the executive he should resign. It was a simple difference of opinion and one which but for practical politics would never have occurred, for while the temperaments of the two men were opposed, they were in great deal of respect for each other. Mr. Garrison was a man of domi- nant personality and it would have been interesting to see him at the head of the war department in the days of the great war which came after his resignation.

The appointment of Robert Lan- sing to succeed William Jennings Bryan as secretary of state was natural because Mr. Lansing, as counsel, had prepared many mem- oranda which had been met by Mr. Wilson in writing the notes to Ger- many and the allied governments on questions of neutrality. Undoubt- edly Mr. Lansing is a great interna- tional lawyer and Mr. Wilson re- cognized his ability, but the president became obsessed with the idea that Mr. Lansing was too fond of precedents and convention and that he was not elastic on questions of policy. Mr. Lansing's difficulties with Mr. Wilson were to a large extent the same kind that John Bassett Moore had with William Jennings Bryan. The legal mind came in conflict with the political mind. Policy in foreign affairs can not al- ways be developed by the same em- piricism or intuition that character- izes decisions on domestic ques- tions, particularly party politics. In- ternational relations, especially in the minds which have been trained to think in terms of sovereign power and tradition, are not as easily re- solved by the rule of expediency as are so many domestic questions.

When Mr. Lansing resigned, Presi- dent Wilson was in ill health and unable to give as much time and thought to the selection of a secre- tary of state as he would have given in earlier days. His first impulse was to transfer Newton D. Baker from the portfolio of secretary of war and have Bainbridge Colby suc- ceed Mr. Baker. The friends of Frank L. Polk, undersecretary of state, were active in his behalf and it looked for a time as if Mr. Wilson might promote Mr. Polk and make no change in the war department. Mr. Colby was not a democrat but had been affiliated with the progressive republican party and had made the speech nominating Theodore Roose- velt in the Bull Moose convention of 1912. Mr. Wilson cherished the hope that the nomination of Mr. Colby to the cabinet would bring to his sup- port the liberals and progressives who had been inclined to stay from him in his last administration.

An undercurrent of gossip to the effect that Secretary Baker had con- sidered the possibility of resigning with respect to the day nursing disqualification of President Wilson to continue in office because of his physical disability in 1919 was brought to Mr. Wilson's attention when he considered the possible ap- pointment of Newton D. Baker as secretary of state. Here again Mr. Wilson applied the acid test of loyalty, not to a friend, but to the country. He asked himself whether there was truth in the current reports concerning Mr. Baker's supposed disaffection. President Wilson was assured that the contrary was for reasons best known to himself he did not transfer Mr. Baker to head the department of state. His nomination for Newton D. Baker was by no means diminished in fact their warm friendship continued long after Mr. Wilson left the White House.

To make it possible for more younger boys to participate in the game of chess, a new table is expected to be purchased with the proceeds of the boys' department minstrel show to be presented at the Myers theater Tuesday night, March 25. Only one table is now in the room, and as it is possible for only four to play at one time, while there are sometimes 30 waiting, the need for a new piece of equipment is immediate. Younger boys are not permitted to play billiards or pool. The present table has been in the building for the past eight or nine years and is in poor condition.

Forty boys attended the minstrel rehearsal Sunday afternoon, and another practice will be held at 7:30 p. m., Tuesday, when the final choice of those who will represent the Junior and Cadets will be made.

H. C. Jack, director of the high school band, will take charge of a boys' orchestra, parts for which have been assigned. They will practice this week.

Two Arrested for Chicken Stealing. Beloit police believe chicken stealing, which has become wide spread through Rock county and Winnebago county, Illinois, will be curbed with the arrest of two men here. The men, who are identified as H. J. Kuehn, 35, of Beloit, and George Greig, 35, of Beloit.

The arrest of the men by Beloit police followed positive identification by one Dever, 25, of Beloit, in possession of Max Bethel, Rockton poultry dealer, as having been stolen from her farm Friday night. Turnure and Greig were arrested by Chief J. Williams and other officers, and Mr. and Mrs. Bethel then identified Turnure as the person from whom they bought the chickens. Following this, Greig confessed that he had participated in the theft of the chickens, implicating Turnure as the actual thief. According to Greig's confession, he watched the automobile while Turnure stole the chickens and then drove away.

One Pleads Guilty. On his plea of guilty to larceny of chickens, entered at the Beloit court Monday morning, Greig was fined $200 and costs or six months in jail by Judge John B. Clark. A plea of not guilty has been entered by Turnure to similar charges, and his preliminary hearing is set for 2 p. m. Thursday.

Beloit police broke all records for speed in solving the mystery of the stolen chickens. Fifty-five minutes after Mrs. Keith had reported the robbery to the police, the chickens had been identified and the men had been arrested. Greig was arrested in Beloit and Turnure in Beloit.

CITY PAIDS HONOR TO PATRON SAINT

St. Patrick's Day Is Gala Time With Numerous Social Functions.

A gala day for entertainments and private parties is St. Patrick's day which is being celebrated in this city with many affairs.

Scenes in Ireland, appropriate to St. Patrick were shown in motion pictures at the junior and senior assembly periods at high school, Monday morning. Green gowns, ribbons, and ornaments were much in evidence. The first signs were erected on South River street and the next on High, Cherry and Lincoln streets. It is planned to complete the Fourth ward first.

The signs are of wood, painted white, with black lettering, and the ends tipped in black, making a most attractive and festive display. In contrast to the present dilapidated metal signs with lettering on only one side, the new ones are marked on each side with black lettering attached to telephone posts with heavy iron brackets.

Wherever possible, telephone posts will be used as standards, but where there are none, small posts will be erected. On streets having ornamental lights, they will be attached to the iron posts at intersections.

The entire job of cutting and painting the signs, making the brackets and erecting the completed signs, was taken care of by city street workers at a great saving over the cost quoted by street sign companies. During his first few days in office, City Manager Henry Traylor notified the auditor of the street marking system and immediately made plans for erecting the signs. The council made plans for the work in the 1924 budget.

Start Check-up on Tax Returns. Some returns are still being received at the office of the county assessor of incomes, P. A. Taylor, he stated Monday, and no penalties will be imposed before the first of April, it is expected. No idea of the amount of business done within the past week or two can be given, as it will be two weeks before the filing and clerical work necessary for a check-up can be completed.

No returns were received in the office of the federal collector, Monday, although there are a few due to the delay. It is thought, J. H. O'Brien, who has been here for the past week, is at the district office at Madison.

Officials urge those who have not yet returned to make payment once. This will not avoid the payment of the 25 percent penalty, but will avoid the one percent per month interest which is charged.

ESSER LEAVES FOR FUNERAL IN WAUSAU. George H. Esser, state president of the Eagles, will leave Monday for Wausau to attend the funeral, Tuesday, of Roy A. Chella, prominent Eagle of that city. Mr. Esser attended an executive committee meeting at Beaver Dam, Sunday, and directed the initiation ceremony there, consequently he was unable to be present at the initiation ceremony in Janesville. A Madison drill team performed at the Beaver Dam rites.

CHARGE DAUGHTERY HEAD OF PLOT TO SHOW EIGHT FILM

While Holdridge was on the stand, the committee also made plans to follow up its investigation into gun-running and the Mexican border and into stories of American financial aid to Mexican revolutionaries.

A. A. Pappo, Chicago, also was summoned to testify. He is a well-known Chicago revolutionary affairs in Lower California.

Meanwhile, the Postal Telegraph company, delivered to the committee, telegrams of Gus T. Jones, a department of justice agent at San Antonio, Texas, dated March 14, P. L. Dehony and Harry E. Sinclair from December 1, 1923, to March 7, 1924.

Holdridge told the committee of investigating exhibition of the light pictures and of an "apparent conspiracy" to violate the law in showing them. The department of justice issued a circular letter in November, 1923, directing attention to the alleged conspiracy.

The department circular signed by J. Edgar Hoover, ordered agents to secure evidence, if possible, which would result in convictions. Before the film was being shown in Albany and other northern New York cities, the committee had an examiner for the United States fidelity and deposit company at Baltimore, Maryland, consider the film as evidence for the department of justice was received October, 1923 and 1922, which time he had not yet come to New York City.

Following the exhibition of the pictures, Holdridge went on to Albany, New York, and there he was arrested. He was held in custody at the Albany house, the witness said, in presence of the president, cabinet officers and other members.

1,500 ENJOY GLEE CLUB'S CONCERT

Auditorium Filled to Capacity for Milton College Entertainment.

One of the largest crowds to attend a community concert here this season were present at that given by the Milton College Glee club at the high school Sunday afternoon, when every seat in the auditorium was filled and many were standing. Hundreds of automobiles were parked about the building.

The entire program given by the organization was of such excellence that expressions of regret at its close were heard, although it lasted more than two hours. The Y. M. C. A. is to be congratulated for sponsoring such an enjoyable entertainment.

Solo numbers by H. R. Sheard, Milton Junction, seemed most popular with the audience. In a short explanation preceding the selections, Mr. Sheard stated that on account of his many appearances here as an impersonator of Harry Lauder, he would sing other than Scotch songs.

Following the singing of "Some Rival Has Stolen My Love Away," "The Empty Teacher," and "Mary Cassidy," he sang several songs taken from the audience and sang the popular Scotch ditty, "When I Was Twenty-one."

Opera Skit Pleases.—An Act of Up-to-date Grand Opera, depicting a fire in a tenement house, and given in costume, was well received. Principal parts were taken by E. C. Hise and Carroll L. Hill. The latter was in the role of "prima donna" Leland W. Hise in the part of the janitor, and the entire piece club in various costumes, ranging from the laundryman and cook to the duke, made the program. While the theme of the sketch was comical, the music retained the standard in keeping with the rest of the concert.

It was taken from well-known operas, such as "The Barber of Seville," "The Marriage of Figaro," "The Italian Opera," and "The Marriage of Figaro," and was a short introductory number to the piece.

Sacred Numbers Good.—Chasman and sacred numbers, including "Amenamus Te," "Send Out Thy Light," and Handel's "Let Their Feet Be Shod in the Gospel," were taken by E. C. Hise and Carroll L. Hill. The latter was in the role of "prima donna" Leland W. Hise in the part of the janitor, and the entire piece club in various costumes, ranging from the laundryman and cook to the duke, made the program.
